NO. 30

THE GIRL WITH aspirations to some day become a great screen star can utilize her moments to advantage now by preparing herself so that she can make her living at some other calling should the necessity ever arise.
This is a bit of advice that may well be considered by all girls, whether they belong to the "screen-struck" family or not.

Just what this other calling may be depends alike on the girl's natural abilities and the opportunities she finds at hand. It may be music or teaching, millinery, stenography or any other of the many occupations in which there is usually a ready demand for an efficient girl's services.

I can think of at least three directions in which the following of this suggestion might be of advantage. In the first place the training that a girl will receive through seriously applying herself to the mastery of any occupation will stand now in good stead when she later on encounters the difficulties incident to the beginnings of a screen career.

In the second place a girl may, with much greater assurance, leave home and go to some producing center with hopes of eventually getting into the pictures, if she is prepared to make her living for a time at something else. This is an almost necessary precaution against the early tribulations of the average "screen-struck" girl. Employment in pictures at first comes slowly and the pay is small. As a result the girl will soon find herself out of money and facing the necessity of giving up all her ambitions and returning home unless she is prepared to throw herself on her own resources and make her way at something else while awaiting new opportunities before the camera.

Finally, as I have remarked in previous "talks," no girl can be sure of ultimate success in pictures. In spite of what she and her friends may think, there is always the possibility that she will not photograph well or that she will fall just a bit short in some other respect. There is a vast difference between the girl that is a good picture actress and the one that is almost good. There is a multitude of the latter who have foolishly counted on a talent that is just a little too weak. They have not prepared themselves for a life work along some other line, and as a consequence must still cling to pictures in their desperation. They eke out a miserable existence, hanging on and playing insignificant bits, knowing that it must always be thus and that they will never reach the goal of their earlier ambitions.

How much better would it be if they could leave this path of recognized failure and throw their whole-souled efforts into some other occupation!

YOU CAN'T FOOL A CHILD.

If you want your children to be perfect, you must expect to set before them an example worth copying.

No child can understand why he or she must do a certain thing a certain way, if daddy and mother are to be exceptions.

The usual explanation is, "It is all right for papa because he is a big man, but it is not right for you to do because you are a little boy."

That does not sound just right to the child and you cannot blame the boy for feeling that something is wrong.

To be a model parent is no light job. It is one of the most important in life, and your best endeavors will not give any greater perfection than is needed to carry you through.

Don't be an exacting taskmaster to that little man or woman.

Be a loving, reasoning and reasonable parent. It pays. But it takes thought and system, a constant watchful eye and a sympathetic interest which is quite readily recognized by the child, and is sure of a response.

Try it.

If it is necessary to keep beef for a time, immerse it in sour milk.

TO MAKE GLASSWARE SPARKLE

"Living in glass houses" was formerly a phrase of reproach. Now the housewife is beginning to realize that glassware in the home means labor saving, comfort, beauty and superior sanitation. Indeed, not until one stops to think how many articles of use are now made of glass which formerly were made of metal or other material, does the importance of glass become evident. Water pitchers, which used to be pewter or silver, goblets which used to be earthen ware or china, baking dishes formerly agate or clay, nappies, bonbon dishes, mustard pots—one could go on forever—are now made of glass instead of any of the numbers of former materials.

Not only do we have plain glass and pressed glass and cut glass, but the most beautiful and varied kind of iridescent rainbow and similar glasses, now made inexpensively enough for general use. Within a few years past several American firms have distinguished themselves by the beauty of the pattern and high quality of their output of glassware. There need be no excuse for ugly, overheavy or ornate pieces when today there is such a wide and beautiful choice of tumbler, pitcher and other articles.

Some housewives err on the side of having too many and too elaborate pieces, which need a great deal of care, and in which there is always danger of breakage. Others from their very fear of this extra work do not purchase pieces that would otherwise add to the attractiveness of their table. In choosing glassware of any kind it is best to avoid the ornate pattern and the deepcut design, both of which will keep the soil most easily and be most difficult to clean.
Rather let the beauty rest in the outline and shape and have the tracing or etching itself be delicate and faint.
It requires taste to choose a piece of cutglass well, for there is all the difference between beauty and ugliness in this kind of glass especially.

To prevent doormats from fraying take a large packing needle, some medium-sized string, and with this buttonhole stitch all round the edges.
The stitches should be about one inch apart and about one inch deep.
This prolongs the life of a doormat for months.

Well Poised Figures

NO WOMAN, however beautiful she might be in face and figure, can hope to be admired if she does not carry herself correctly. I do not mean to carry herself with rigid precision, could practise walking around a room and hold one's self quite as correctly without using the book, but the average woman will not do it. The book naturally puts the head at the right position in connection with the spine.

You should have several full-length mirrors in your house if you can afford them. Simply because you straighten up unconsciously to look well on parade before the glass.

Remember only to keep the chest up as you walk or sit, the rest will follow. You cannot droop your shoulders nor hold the abdomen out.
If your chest is up. Then, also, you allow space within the lungs for more air, which in turn reacts, giving the blood more vitality and power.

Health is dependent upon so many things—and each little improvement made influences so many other parts of the body, that even such a small thing as holding the chest so it can breathe properly may make the difference between good and bad health, indifferent looks or prettiness.

The woman who wants to appear beautiful must never allow herself to slump or to appear careless in carriage. This mars beauty more than anything else.

Questions and Answers I am thin enough, except around the hips and back. There I am out of all proportion fat; it makes me look funny.
Please suggest a way to reduce the hips—Annabelle.

Reply—Massage the fatty parts with the hands, rub with kneading and pressing them out. However, the pores just filled up with dirt again, and my face looks now as badly as when I started.—Miriam.

Reply—After squeezing out the dirt from a blackhead, touch the spot with cotton dipped in peroxide, to cleanse the spot, then, as soon as the treatment is finished, wash the face in cold water and finish by rubbing ice over it. This shrinks and reduces the pores, so other dirt cannot fill first.

The commonest fault is stooped shoulders. The old-fashioned way of treating this is best—practising walking up and down a room with a book on the head. Of course, one

FIT JEWELS TO EVERY FROCK.

For a long time there has been much talk about the fact that jewelry, to be most effective, should be chosen with especial reference to the frock with which it is to be worn. The intrinsic value of jewels means less and less, and their decorative value means more.

At last the jewelry makers have realized the trend of popular opinion —and the result is jewelry of distinctive sort, made especially to bring out the best points of summer frocks.
This new jewelry is not expensive; the whole object of its being is to have it inexpensive enough so that different pieces may be worn with different frocks. But it is very pretty and very effective.

There are rings, there are pins, there are bracelets and pendants and chains. And they are all made to emphasize different color schemes.

Many of the pendants are elaborately set on cross-cross backgrounds of silver or black enamel. They hang from silver or black chains in most effective fashion. Enamel and the cheaper stones are largely used for this new jewelry, which deserves attention from every woman who likes the details of her costume to be just right.
